

JENN NUCCUM

ABOUT

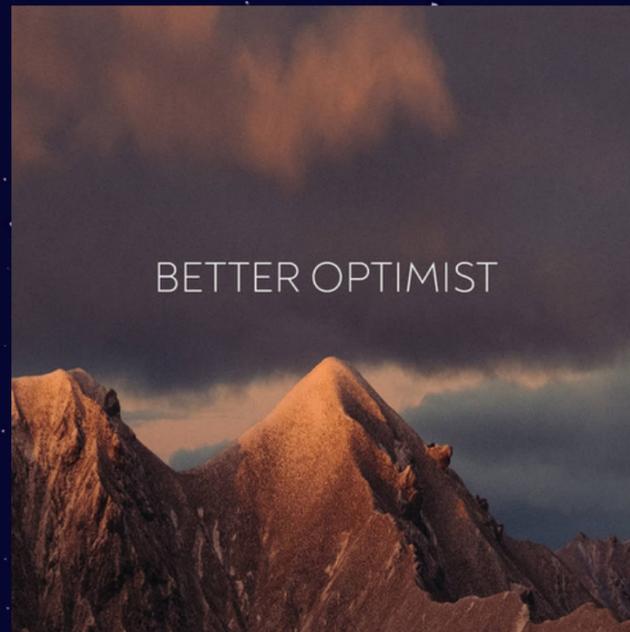

Jenn Nucum (she/her/hers) is an emerging Filipinx singer-songwriter based in Toronto. Navigating life as a diasporic queer woman of colour, Jenn's music examines the complexities of identity in relation to socio-political issues. Her songs draw inspiration from melodic Alternative and Indie Rock to heavy Post-Rock influences, paired with honest lyrics and emotive vocals.

In September 2020, Jenn was a participant in MusicOntario's Canadian Songwriter Challenge, where she had the opportunity to write and produce demos of three original songs, under the mentorship of renowned Juno- and Grammy-nominated musicians Terra Lightfoot, Adrian X (Drake, The Weeknd), and Moe Berg (TransCanada Highwaymen, The Pursuit Of Happiness).

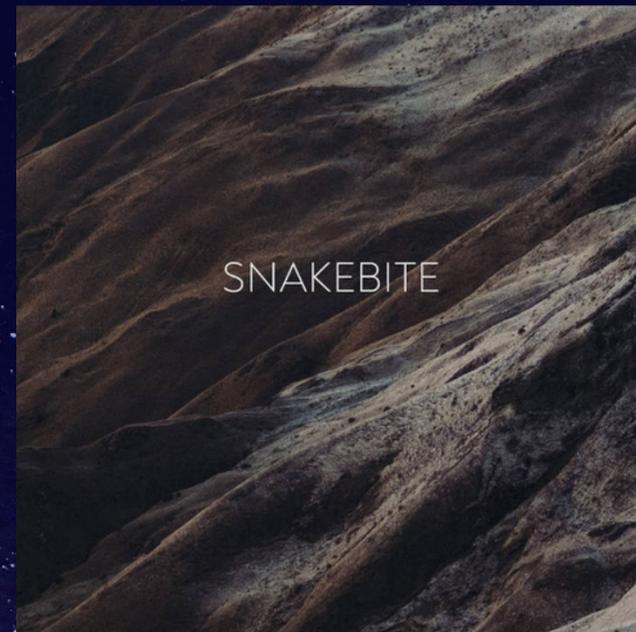

At the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, which affected her debut album release in 2020, Jenn swiftly turned to writing more songs exploring themes of isolation, self-awareness, social justice, and reckoning with issues caused by colonialism, capitalism, and racism in Canada. Her upcoming second record is a six-track EP slated for release in Spring 2022.

PRESS

"[Revival] is one of these albums where POC can really look up to and feel empowered to make their own music."

- No Filter CHUO 89.1

"Canadian frontwoman takes influence from Phoebe Bridgers on this soft yet soaring post-rock-inspired swoon [Snakebite]."

- Mystic Sons

"[Out For Blood] shines through its vocals alone. Skating on subtly dramatic guitar lines, Jenn Nucum's gentle yet determined voice draws attention to her sharp, observant lyricism that calls out social injustices."
